The Chinese President Xi Jinping delivered an important speech at the Global Health Summit, calling on us to work together, and jointly promote the construction of a human health community and protect the bright future of human health. The world is currently facing numerous development opportunities and challenges, including the rapid development of knowledge and technology, the challenges of COVID-19, shifts in people's lifestyles and disease spectrum, and changes in economic trade and political relations among countries, etc. Our world needs to build a cross-cultural, interdisciplinary, inclusive, and global scientific platform with a cooperative and win-win academic atmosphere. Therefore, we gather together to discuss human health issues, push forward interdisciplinary international cooperation, jointly address human challenges, and promote global health.
