The 3rd Asia International Water Week Kick-off meeting

Concept Paper for the 3rd AIWW

Objective

The Asia International Water Week (AIWW) is a triennial water gathering to share practical solutions to solve Asian water problems. It is organized by Asia Water Council (AWC) in collaboration with the host country. Regional water problems that were discussed throughout the three years of the preparatory process of the AIWW will be raised as primary issues of the Asian water community and will be disseminated to the global water community with action plans to solve them.

The tangible plans to implement solutions will be particularly highlighted by organizing the sessions on the pertinent topics. Designing the future plans for collected action plans will be the core part of the gathering in the AIWW.

Stakeholders and preeminent experts gather at the AIWW to share their insights and experiences to support the activities of AWC and pave the way towards sustainable development in Asia. As the AIWW is held one year prior to the World Water Forum, major gathering for the preparatory process and the follow up action process will be held at the World Water Forum.

When and where will the AIWW be held?

The AIWW will be held every three years, one year prior to the World Water Forum by AWC in collaboration with the host country that will bid three years prior to the AIWW. The 1st AIWW was successfully held in Gyeongju City, Republic of Korea September 2017. The 2nd AIWW was successfully held in Bali, Indonesia in March 2022 (postponed due to the COVID-19 pandemic). The 3rd AIWW is going to be held in Beijing, China in September, 2024.

How can Asia benefit from AWC and AIWW?

One of the core values of AWC is to raise primary regional water issues of concerns and findings through AWC members' 'Implementation of water solutions to Asian water problem'.

This will be fulfilled by promoting 'Asian sustainable growth' to successfully provide tangible and practical water solutions with appropriate methodologies. Accordingly, AWC is aimed to encourage common prosperity and to achieve the SDGs by solving Asian water challenges with the stakeholders including governments, MDBs, ECAs, public organizations, academia & research organizations, and international organizations as well as civil societies within the AWC platform.

In this regard, AWC will become a distinctive entity, which has never previously existed, focusing on water related issues in Asia and providing practical solutions with applicable implementation methodologies.

Session Program 1

Asia Water Issue

1. Asia Water Issue Session 7 July 2023 / 1F Grand Hall, Meeting Rooms

Participants

- (Governments) Central and Local Governments from Asian Countries.
- (Industry) Water Enterprises (Engineering, Consulting and Construction firms)
- (Experts) Water Professionals from various Sectors (MDBs, academia, etc.)

2. Background

- Asia Water Council (AWC) is a global water network focused on providing tangible solutions on Asian Water Challenges and facilitating multilateral discussions among stakeholders. The AWC will coordinate with stakeholders during identification and implementation of tangible solutions. The AWC is the principal organizer and sponsor of the 1st Asia International Water Week (AIWW).
- Asia Water Issues highlight the central role of water in sustainable and resilient development. There is an emphasis on the foundational roles of knowledge, technology and data in implementing this objective – across all aspects of research, innovation, policy and practice as well as on other important topics and issues.

3. Linkages

- After the several thematic discussions, finding the practical and sustainable solutions for each water related problems respectively, a common voice was raised to demand an influential multi-lateral water organization with the power of execution for implementing solutions identified through the discussions.
- Asia Water Issues are an important agenda for AIWW and AWC. It provides practical solutions for stakeholders with diverse interests to gather and discuss water related topics and address water issues through prior analyses, trend linkage, and global capacity building.

4. Objectives

Operating the parallel sessions to seek for political/technical solutions to Asia water problems, and derive '6 Sub-themes' and '24 Topics'.

Session Program 4

Asia to World Statement

1. Background

In recognition that water is essential for the survival of all life and ecosystems, and plays as a cross-cutting factor to achieve Agenda 2030 for Sustainable Development Goals and the global water-related targets, the 3rd Asia International Water Week seeks to revise and reform the Asia to World Statement that was previously.

The first Asia to World Statement underscored the basic concepts regarding on the importance of water and sustainability in general. Therefore, to reduce the ambiguity and elaborate sophisticated clauses in hopes of providing more insightful guidance when countries are establishing action plans, the Statement will incorporate the themes suggested below.

2. Objectives

The objectives of the Asia to World Statement are as follows:

A. The Statement will be divided into three divisions – ministerial, parliamentarian, and Asia water expert levels – to establish clauses for suitable action plans that could take place specific to each level and initiate cross-sectoral commitments to attain shared goals.

B. The Statements for all levels are affirmed in accordance with 6 main themes and 24 sub-themes(TBC) of the 3rd AIWW, which were carefully chosen to address the main and timely water issues that Asia is currently going through.

C. Asia to World Statement aims primarily to provide an appropriate reference to fundamental values that all countries should incorporate, and outline the roadmap that Asian countries can take into the consideration when establishing action plans to enhance sustainable and resilient water management.
